The Adventures of Juan Plus Sven: The Prime-aries

By Ryan Opp

J: Hello Ladies and Gentlemen, and welcome to tonight's coverage of the Prime-number Prime-aries and Composite Caucuses. I'm Juan, and this is Sven, and we will be comparing some of the candidates of each party. Sven?

S: Thanks Juan. I'd like to start off by saying that the Prime Numbers are very single-issue. When you look at each candidate, they are really only concerned with a Single Factor.

J: But, to be fair, the Composite Party is Easily Divided.

S: Granted, but let me say this: when you look at the Root of any Prime Number, they always get very Irrational.

J: The same can be said about many Composites.

S: Not all. Some are "Perfect."

J: Perfect what, though? Squares, Cubes, Hypercubes...

S: Hey! It's hip to be Square, man!

J: Whatever.

S: Let's look at attendance in the House of Integers. Primes fluctuate, and it can be an arbitrarily long time before they bother showing up again.

J: But-

S: And another thing: what's up with the bureaucracy? These Mersenne Primes are all buried slightly under a Tower of Poo!

J: That's Power of Two, you idiot! They are all just under a Power of Two!

S: Whatever. Ladies and Gentlemen, we need to cut to commercial, but don't go away!

J: That's right. Keep it Real (not Complex or Imaginary)!

S: Oh shut up.
